

There is a country in which a forest of mighty pure trees grows strong. The queen of the country has a sword which can hide its bearer, and we shall call it Loka.

Near the edge of the forest, beasts called eve are hiding and the creatures have long fur and walk on legs which are as long as an average person. If people walk there, soldiers will magically raise signs for them. Because walkers are not eve, if they meet the soldier's magical sword, the eve speak like they do. Either you will be killed by my soldiers or brought to me, Tezos, known by all, for not being my subjects.

Tidu lived near the edge of the forest. The queen was annoyed by her but her son was attracted to her, and his name was Sie. Tidu valued her home near the forest's edge and had worked a lot for her family. She made a plan.

Before that, the walkers, avoiding eve, considered that the edge of the world. Loka meets either Sie or an eve. Then eve have payment and she can leave. How safe is Loka when there are no soldiers?

Tidu discussed with the eve and set the leadership of Sie for sale before paying with her magic. Sie did no live eternally like gods anymore. The eve took it and gave Sie to Tidu. Tidu and Sie went home.